The parties agree that the parent who does not have scheduled visitation with a child on that child's birthday shall have 2 hours visitation with the child either on the day before or on the day after his or her birthday, at times which are mutually agreeable to the parties, and do not disrupt the child's activities.

The parties also agree that they each may have two weeks' vacation time with the children, which may be taken consecutively, or in increments. The parties further agree that they each shall have telephone contact with the minor children at all reasonable times and places during the vacation period, The parties agree to consider the plans and activities of the minor children when scheduling vacations.

Each party agrees to give the other party 30 days' advance written notice prior to his/her intended vacation with the minor children along with his/her destination and a complete itinerary, and telephone number and address where he or she can be reached during his/her vacation with the minor children.

* This schedule includes every major holiday, including those for the Christian and Jewish religions. You can strike out the holidays that don't apply to you, add in religious holidays for your religion, and use as many or as few of these holidays as you like.
